No. XX.
On earth Peace, good will towards Men.
The extracts which have been made from the seven numbers of the "Friend of Peace," and which have been communicated to the public, through the medium of this Gazette, in the thirteen preceding numbers, were concluded in the last. If they have been interesting to the reader, or have excited in his mind, a wish to see the subjects at large, the writer would suggest to him, the benefit of both to himself and to the public, of joining the Massachusetts Peace Society, which, (as mentioned in a former number) supplies each of its members the "Friend of Peace" and other publications at the wholesale price, or he may become a member of the "Peace Society of Maine" lately established in the town of Portland, which may, and probably will, furnish its subscribers, with the same pamphlets, at the same price. Of the design of this Society, the public have been informed, by a publication of its constitution, in the last Gazette. It is a design which (however it may succeed) the writer thinks none will disapprove, though some may at first consider it utopian and its object unattainable. The object is indeed beyond the reach of men, unaided by the power of God, but they have good ground to hope that this power will be excited to obtain it; for the time will come when wars shall cease. When, is known only to Him who sees the end from the beginning—not perhaps to them who have passed the meridian of life, yet it may come soon. The prophecies are fulfilling, more rapidly than we may have yet conceived—and all perhaps, through the instrumentality of men. Men have been excited, employed, and directed by God, to carry on his great designs.
It is one, that the Gospel shall be preached "to every nation and kindred and tongue and people."
What a rapid spread of it is seen and heard of, at the present day! How remarkable is it, that this is effected by means of Bible Societies and Missionary Societies, the former of which have been multiplied in Europe and America, to an astonishing degree, and the latter are already becoming very numerous. Through these, it appears to be the will of God that the command of his Son should be obeyed "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature," and why may it not be reasonably supposed, that, by means of Peace Societies, that prediction will be fulfilled which declares that "Nation shall not lift up sword against nation." When "the wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the lion shall hurt or destroy in all God's holy mountain" If by such means, the great Governor of the world, executes his purposes, who can decline the honor of engaging in his service? of being a co-worker with him, in effecting them? Say not that the little you can do, will be of no avail, in so great a cause. Though an individual can do but "little," an association, or the combined aid, of many individuals can do much. In the erection of a building however large, every brick is useful.
What stupendous works have been accomplished by united exertions!—What wonders are union and perseverance, joined with vigorous enterprise, continually effecting, in the important concerns of the world, in commerce, politics and war! Let him who is inclined to doubt and despond, when a great work of benevolence is proposed, contemplate the pyramids of Egypt" or St. Peter's Church at Rome.
"They were executed by human hands. Or to take an object with which our readers are more familiar; let him see the oaks taken from our forests—the ore from our hills, and the hemp from our fields, and transformed into a ship of the line."
But who should despair of effecting a work which infinite wisdom has planned, and in which almighty power is engaged.
To conclude, by a word of excitement to Christian contributions. Let the foregoing considerations stimulate every one who has a disposition to serve God, to enlist with cheerfulness in his service and let him attentively and seriously enquire what God would have him to do.
The writer trusts he shall be excused for making no exemptions; for "every one," he thinks can aid his cause in one way or another. The poor, by their prayers, and by prompting others to "engage in it, and the rich, not only by these means, but by pecuniary contributions. Reflect, wealthy Christians—that our property is under God's control, and that you are accountable to him, for all that you possess. If a part of it be wanted to further his designs, yield it with alacrity. Consider that though your Gold and Silver is His, He asks it of you only as a loan—He will repay you a thousand fold.
His demands are very reasonable too. He asks but "little," although his occasions for it be of vast importance; less, far less, than you would require for a mere personal gratification.
There are many associations at the present day, all formed, we trust, from a principle of love to God and benevolence to men, with a view to promote the purposes of His will. Leave not their support to the comparatively few who have formed them, but unite with them, and thus, with the co-operation of Him in whose cause they are engaged be instrumental in advancing that cause, and thereby of promoting the glory of God and the happiness of man. It is not however from all, but from those only who have more than their necessities require, that contributions are expected. They are expected according to what a man hath, and not according to what he hath not—and it is left to every one to judge of his own ability; but let him judge righteously, between his all bountiful benefactor and himself—and according to the importance of the object for which his benefactions are requested.

LONDON, JAN. 29.—In the Commons an amendment to the address in answer to Mr. Ponsonby, couched in the usual language of the opposition. After a long debate, in which Mr. Canning appeared as the prominent Speaker on the part of the Ministry, the House divided:

* Gen. Dearborn formerly lived in this town, and of course, is well known. His old neighbors who had often dwelt with him before, knew him to be a very good surveyor of roads, but never thought of his becoming a Governor, although since he left the banks of the Kennebec, he has, by means of fat offices, become rich and proud, and rides in his coach and four.—Hallowell Gas.
